DATE:

MARCH 28, 1989

By April 29, 1989, a new rule promulgated by the National Highway Traffic Administration, will become effective and will amend certain portions of the truth in the mileage act of 1986. Among the amended portions of the act will be a requirement that both the seller and the buyer sign the odometer statement. The area of the title most convenient for the buyer to sign the odometer statement is directly below the signature of the seller, the space currently reserved for the notary. Out of fifty (50) states thirty-three (33) states do not require a notary certification.

Notarization of the certificate of title was originally supposed to validate the identity of the vehicle owner at the time of sale. However; it is impossible to verify notary information because notaries are not required to keep records on their notary activities. There have been few, if any occasions in the past to prosecute a notary for false notarization.

Attached is a copy of the language to be placed on the back of the title. This language has been approved by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.
