Re: A Constitutional Convention of the States

To Whom It May Concern:

The problem we face in the United States is not a flawed or bad Constitution. Our problem is a very strong minority that hates the Constitution we have and the Republic for which it stands.

This minority has patiently wormed its way into our institutions of Law, Education and Mass Communications. This minority could not care less what the current Constitution or any "updated" Constitution says. They are effectively LAWLESS.

IF this ConCon is held, I have no doubt it will be subverted by this lawless minority and we will have lost our Right to Bear Arms, our Right to Free Speech and our Right to Free Assembly and others.

Even IF a ConCon were to result in a document equivalent in Rights and Freedoms to the one we currently have, the Enemies of Freedom will pay no attention to it - just as they ignore the current Constitution.

The real issue of our time is the failure of Conservatives to insist on the rule of law and to put forth the effort to enforce it.

Waving "new paper" in front of this Lawless Minority is an act of futility and a fool's errand.
